

NATASHA HAMILTON

From Atomic Kitten to health and beauty blogger, Natasha Hamilton is coming back to the music industry...

Natasha Hamilton is the lead singer of the popular, early 2000's band Atomic Kitten. With 19 singles and 3 studio albums Natasha has had a successful career as an artist before turning to a family orientated life.

The biggest single 'Whole Again' sold over two million copies worldwide in 2001. The single reached Number 1 in nine countries across the globe and stayed Number 1 in the UK for four weeks. Since then hits such as 'Feels so Good', 'Ladies Night', 'The Tide is High' and 'Eternal Flame' were also a huge success around the UK and the world.

Taking a break from Atomic Kitten, Natasha moved into the theatre and performed in large stage productions of Blood Brothers and Peter Pan in 2012.

In 2018 Natasha won the Best Female Singer award at the Boisdale Music Awards, as well as winning the award she performed a Gladys Knight classic 'Best Thing That Ever Happened to Me', live on stage to celebrate.

In the last few years Natasha has been spending time focusing on her family life, lifestyle blogging and public speaking. But now Natasha is ready to return to the music industry and has some big plans for the future. Natasha has signed with new management and will be releasing a new solo album, with plans of a full album and tour in 2021.
